Introduction.

The Gladiolus is the favorite flower at "ELMWOOD TERRACE", and many thousands of the world's best varieties are grown here, primarily for the pleasure of the owners of the gardens. Naturally each year a large surplus of bulbs must be disposed of to keep within planting space, especially as the gladiolus should not be grown on the same ground two consecutive years, if the best results are desired.

Our bulbs are grown under conditions conducive to the development of the finest quality possible so as to insure prize winning blooms for house and garden decoration, as well as for the big shows. Last August at the big annual show at Boston, of the New England Gladiolus Society, and the American Gladiolus Society, our flowers were awarded the Kunderd gold medal, and sixteen (16) other prizes out of twenty (20) entries. This in competition with professional as well as amateur growers. With these stocks, any amateur observing the proper care in planting, cultivating and watering should produce the same quality of prize winning blooms in his own garden. Those who know the gladiolus only as the small stiff red blooms of our grandmother's time would hardly recognize a relationship to the wonderful creations the modern hybridizers have given us—creations of wonderful size—wonderful colorings—all the tints and shades of the rainbow, the glorious combinations of color in the orchid flowering kinds—the ethereal beauty of the delicate shades with ruffled petals. You may have many hundreds of bulbs and no two exactly alike, so great are the variations in this "The People's Orchid."

From the grandest estate to the humblest dooryard, the gladiolus is paramount among the floral beauties—every year the latest introductions—the newer prize winners are tested in our gardens and if worthy are added to our magnificent collection. We have many varieties not listed in these pages, but if the connoisseur is seeking a particular rare variety, and will write us, we will be more than likely to have it, and if possible will supply one or more bulbs according to the quantity of stock on hand. We take a particular pride in having our bulbs true to name, but if an error occurs, the purchaser has only to report it and the stock will be replaced.

Bulbs will be delivered during March and April, unless otherwise specified.

Prize for early award.
